August, 1992

Futurists predict that we will witness more change in the last decade of this century than we've seen over the past 90 years. Instead of simply talking to each other on the phone, we'll also be looking at the other person on a video screen. Cars will steer away from gasoline and run on electricity and solar power. It's also predicted that televisions will become obsolete, only to be replaced by holographic images.

These are changes we, as Albertans, anticipate and look forward to in the years to come. Yet only half a world away, people will see no such changes. For them, a welcome change could only come in the form of less famine, less disease, less disaster, and less poverty in their daily lives.

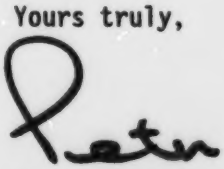
It makes me proud that the Alberta Agency for International Development (AAID) has endeavoured to ease some of our world's injustices and it gives me great pleasure to present the 1991/92 Annual Review.

During the past year, a total of 155 projects in 56 countries received over $1.95 million in financial support from AAID. These projects were managed by 77 NGO's which raised almost $22 million in Alberta.

The Alberta Government was pleased to extend our generosity and benevolence by helping to provide emergency relief to the victims of a cyclone which hit Bangladesh. We also offered humanitarian relief and rehabilitation to the refugees and people displaced as a result of the crisis in the Persian Gulf. In addition, we were proud to support the Aga Khan Foundation Canada in their presentation of the Hope: Seeing Our World Through New Eyes exhibit in Edmonton and Calgary.

Once again, I am proud of the support the Government was able to provide over the last year through the Alberta Agency for International Development. I'm confident this year's review will prove, once again, to be informative and helpful to NGO's and their supporters across the province.

Yours truly,



Peter Elzinga
Minister
